INTERNATIONAL UNION OF NUTRITIONAL SCIENCES – MEMBERSHIP

- Adherence from a country to the Union as a member is through a principal Academy, or National Research Council, or other appropriate scientific group duly recognized specifically as an Adhering Body by the General Assembly.
- The term “Country” shall be understood to include nutrition scientists representing a defined geographical area (or areas) which have an independent budget for scientific purposes; there shall be only one member presenting each such area or scientific community.
- The General Assembly may accept as Affiliated Bodies appropriate international and regional organisations covering more than one “Country” as defined above.
- Each Adhering Body shall be required to pay annual subscription to the Union on a basis approved by the General Assembly. Adherence of an accredited scientific community will be established when the body has formally accepted the Statutes of the Union and has paid its initial annual dues. Affiliated Bodies pay no annual fees.
- A member desirous of resigning from the Union must give three months’ notice of resignation in writing, addressed to the Secretary General. Any Adhering Body declared in arrears with its subscription beyond three years shall cease to be a member of the Union at the end of the third calendar year.
